The story of Lord Ganesha Enjoy reading this Hindu mythological history of Lord Ganesha's story. One day, the goddess Parvathi, Lord Shiva's wife, was preparing for her bath and needed someone to protect her room. So he made a nice guy from the sandalwood from his body. She gave him life by sprinkling him with the water of the Holy Ganges and entrusted him with the guard of the door. While away, Lord Shiva returned and was surprised to find a child standing at the entrance to his wife's room. When he tried to get in, the boy blocked his path. Who are you and why are you blocking my path? No one enters my mother's room, declared the boy boldly. Caught off guard, Lord Shiva replied: Move away; I have the right to enter my wife's room. But the brave young boy did not move, but stood his land. Not knowing that this was his son, Lord Shiva, who was ready to rage he became enraged. He was not disobeyed, he cut off the boy's head. The goddess Parvathi on her return from the bathroom saw her son lying dead and was overcome with grief. It was full of anger and pain. Seeing this Lord Shiva sent his soldiers to take the head of the first beast they saw. The men rushed and eventually approached an elephant. They immediately took the head of Lord Shiva, who quickly attached her to the body of the slain boy and gave him life once more. To further appease his grieving wife he promised that his son would be worshipped first, before all the other gods. Even today at the entrance to all the temples would be the idol of the elephant-headed God, Lord Ganesha.
